New DOH Blog Post: Doing Our Part to Protect Others

People who feel sick with COVID-19 symptoms like fever, cough, and shortness of breath are at their most contagious. However, people can spread the virus for 1-3 days before they get symptoms. During this time, they feel well, and if they are not taking precautions like social distancing and great hand washing, they can spread the virus to others.

Washington State Department of Health (DOH) is reminding the community that protecting others starts with good personal health habits, and encourages the following:

- Stay home when you're sick
- Stay home as much as possible when you feel healthy
- Cover your coughs and sneezes with a tissue
- Wash your hands!
- Disinfect the things you touch
- Consider wearing a fabric mask
